CHAIRMAN HAYS ANNOUNCES POLICY OF "HANDS OFF" AT NOMINATION

I have repeatedly stated my belief that the duty of the Chairman of the National Committee is to elect the candidate and not select him. I shall square my performance with my promise. There shall be no word nor act of mine which will directly or indirectly influence in any way the result of any contest in any state for delegates to the Republican National Convention nor the choice by the delegates in the convention. It makes no difference what may be said by any person for any reason at any time in any place in the country indicating any other wish of mine. It simply is not true. I am sure that any who would suggest another course will on reflection approve my irrevocable position in this regard—Will H. Hayes.

NO RFDUCTIONS CAN BE MADE

No reductions will be made by Congress this year, they assert. Republican Leader Mondell and Democratic leader Kitchin framer of the present tax laws, join in saying that the proposal of former Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo for a billion dollar reduction in taxes and the floating of a large bond issue to make up for the losses is impossible at this time and would imperil the whole financial structure of the nation.

Court Decision On Taxing Stock Dividends Causes Wild Market

1920 REVENUE ACT INVALID

WASHINGTON, March 8—The Supreme Court today held unconstitutional the 1920 revenue act providing for levying income taxes on stocks dividends.

NEW YORK, March 8.—The stock market was thrown into the utmost confusion this afternoon by conflicting reports from several sources on the decision of the United States Supreme Court on stock dividend taxes. The first dispatches reaching the floor of the exchange were that the dividends were taxable and before these were corrected and it was known that the court held they were not taxable, there was a fever of selling. Big blocks of stock were put out for short account and those on the long lists threw their holdings overboard. All of the New York ticker services carried erroneous reports.

Crucible Steel, affected more than any other by the decision, broke from 196 to 191 on the early dispatches and then went to 25 within ten minutes. General Motors broke from 275 to 264 and then rallied to 279 1-2, a new high for the day. Brokers on the floor reported that they were unable to take care of the orders, except in Crucible, American Woolen and Baldwin.

At 1:30 p. m. General Motors soared to 290 up 31 1-4 points. United States Steel opened at 97 off 1-2, Crucible at 196 1-2 off 3-8, Republic at 88 1-2 off 7-8. Studebaker at 86 3-4 off 5-8, United States Rubber at 101 3-4 off 1-2, and Mexican Petroleum at 176 3-4 off 1, Westinghouse at 51 1-2 off 1-2, Midvale 46 5-8.

A slump in Sterling exchange, as great as its sensational rise, was indicated today when the British Exchange opened at 3.55, a drop of 5 1-4 cents from Saturday's close.

ICE FLOOD DAMAGE CONFINED TO BRIDGES

Aside from the destruction of the Deer Creek and Rollingstone bridges no further damage is reported from down the river by Saturday's brief but destructive ice flood. The quick change in the weather undoubtedly saved a much greater property loss.

As was stated in The Progress on Saturday the ice which had come out of Clearfield creek and the other small streams along the river had jammed at several points between ere and Deer Creek and when Thursday night's rain raised the upper river and creek so rapidly the flood was more in the nature of an old-time spring "splash."

There is a large body of deep dead water below the Deer Creek bridge and the ice at this point by reason of that fact and the severe winter was exceptionally heavy. There was not enough water there Friday morning to start this heavy bed of ice and the result was when the upriver flood reached this point it was unable to force its way through and a jam quickly formed. The ice piled up and the river rose so rapidly that it soon reached a point but two feet below the high water mark of the June flood of 1889.

The current carried the flow over to the Cooper township side of the bridge and the ice piled up until it lifted half the bridge off its foundations. The span on that side toppled over onto the ice and the added weight of the bridge was sufficient to start the jam to moving and it swept on down around "Uncle Pete's Point" through the rapids below.

The bridge rode on top of the ice the intervening five or six miles to Rollingstone and simply swept that bridge 360 feet long off both pier and abutments and both bridges then continued on with the flood for a considerable distance before lodging.

From reports received by the County Commissioners thus far they are of the opinion the remaining half of Deer Creek bridge can be made fit for travel and it will be only necessary to replace the one span. Whether or not it will be possible to salvage and restore the Rollingstone bridge has not yet been determined and cannot be until the final location and condition of the wreck is learned.

LOCAL YOUNG MAN VICTIM OF PNEUMONIA

Charles Cuetara died at his home on Pine street at 4 o'clock this morning of pneumonia, following an attack of influenza. The deceased suffered a severe attack of influenza about three weeks ago and was quite sick for a time. He had so far recovered as to be able to be about last week. He was up town on Wednesday and Thursday, but during Thursday evening he developed pneumonia and his case became serious from the start. Despite the best of care and attention he grew rapidly worse, until the end this morning.

Charley Cuetera was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cuetara, and was born and raised in Clearfield. He was an expert painter and paper hanger and was employed by D. W. Speck for a number of years. He was an industrious, upright young man of genial disposition, and his sudden death was a sad shock to his host of friends.

He was about 45 years of age and is survived by two brothers and four sisters, as follows: Frank and John Cuetara, Mrs. F. X. Shillen and Mrs. W. E. Murphy, of Clearfield; Mrs. K. A. Fleming, of Washington, D. C.; Mrs. John Malone, of Chicago.

HEALTH OFFICER AT ALTOONA

Thomas G. Herbert, a former Clearfielder, was elected Health Officer of Altoona on Friday night last by the City Council. Mr. Herbert formerly held that position for many years, but was the victim of a political change a few years ago and lost out for a time. His local friends will be pleased to hear of Tom's comeback.

Hazard Murray has returned from a business trip to Philadelphia.

MORNING TRAIN CANNOT BE CHANGED

Superintendent Johnson In Letter To The Progress Says It Is Impossible

PENNSY DOING BEST IT CAN

The Progress having been informed that it was possible to have the morning train on the Pennsylvania railroad arrive in Clearfield from Tyrone a couple of hours earlier than the present schedule, which gets in here at 11:15, took the matter up with Supt. J. K. Johnson by letter on Friday last. We were advised by several business men that the morning mail trains both east and west, arrived in Tyrone before 7:30 a. m., and it was hoped that if this information were correct, the branch train could be started from Tyrone by 7:30 and thus give Clearfield business men an extra two hours in which to take care of their mail and get their necessary replies off in the first afternoon mail.

The following reply from Supt. Johnston shows that to be impossible and that the Pennsy is giving us the very best service possible under conditions as they really exist

The Clearfield Progress,
Clearfield, Pa.

Dear Sir:

Replying to your letter of the 5th instant, in which you ask if it would be possible for us to change the leaving time of our morning Clearfield branch passenger train from 8:45 a. m. to 7:30 a. m.

You state that if it were possible to make this change, it would be a decided advantage to the business interests of Clearfield and other towns along the branch, in that it would give them an opportunity to take care of their mail and get replies through in time to utilize the mails going out after dinner, etc. This, however, would not be the case. If we were to advance the time of train 6402 to 7:30 a. m., this train would miss all main line connections at Tyrone both east and west, in which case the mail would not reach your district until the afternoon train, No. 6404, leaving Tyrone at 4:15 p. m. Under the present arrangement of the main line schedules, we are scarcely able to get No. 6402 out on time and secure all connections at Tyrone.

From an operating standpoint it would be desirable to start this train from Tyrone earlier, but under the present method of operation and the time main line connections reach us, it would be practically impossible to make this cange.

Yours truly,
J. W. JOHNSTON,
Sperintendent

WILLIAM HARRISON BUCKWALTER

A veteran of the Civil war, died at the home of his sister, Mrs. L. J. Hawn in Huntingdon on Thursday night last, death being caused by an attack of asthma. LEGAL BATTLE ON "DRY" LAW OPENED BY ROOT

WASHINGTON, March 8—The validity of constitutional prohibition will be fought out in a legal battle of attorneys for the federal government, the dry states, the wet states and the liquor interests in the United States Supreme Court today. A decision is not expected to be made before April or later.

One of the greatest fights ever made on any statute or part of the constitution has been begun again the dry states by the wet forces. The issue today centered on whether prohibition is a valid subject for an amendment to the constitution and whether the Volstead act enforcing the amendment is constitutional. Practically twenty-five angles of attacks have been lodged against the two.

The line up in court today finds Rhode Island vigorously contesting constitutional prohibition while opposition to it are the federal government, 21 prohibition states represented by Chas. E. Hughes and the Anti-Saloon League. New Jersey will ask the court for permission to bring a suit similar to that of Rhode Island.

As the court met Elihu Root obtained permission to file a brief from the United States Brewers' Association supporting the contention of Rhode Island. Root said "the passage of the so-called 18th amendment is not within the authority vested in Congress. The so-called 18th amendment has not been ratified by three-fourths of the states."

TWO COSTLY FIRES AT DUBOIS WITH $20,000 LOSS YESTERDAY MORNING

Within a few hours of each other two disastrous fires occurred in DuBois yesterday, one at 11:15 o'clock in the morning and the other at 6:15 o'clock in the evening. The origin of neither fire is definitely known. The first fire partially destroyed the complete bakery of William Pistner on South Franklin street and the second one destroyed a barn and two dwellings belonging to John Schrecogost o South Jared street. A strong wind was blowing during the progress of the fires and it was only by the utmost endeavors that the firemen held the loss to the estimated $20,000 loss. The firemen fought against great disadvantages in both instances, water plugs being frozen and their efforts are to be commended.

REORGANIZATION OF DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

HARRISBURG, March 8—(United Press)—Frederick Rasmussen, secretary of the Pennsylvania Department of agriculture, announced today the reorganization of that department provided for under an Act of 1919, as completed.

Significant in the reorganization is the close co-operation of the Pennsylvania State College, United States Department of Agriculture, the county farm bureaus, state associations and other agricultural organizations.

The department is now divided into six bureaus, each in charge of a director, responsible to Secretary Rasmussen, the work of each centering in an administrative office. These bureaus work as a unit with the federal and state organizations. The six bureaus and the duties attached thereto are:

Bureau of Animal Industry, carrying on the work of the old livestock sanitary board. It provides for quarantine enforcement and disease control and eradication of all animal diseases.

Bureau of Plant Industry, taking over the work of the old economic zoologist. This bureau has charge of plant pest control, nursery inspection and deals with all diseases and pests afflicting Pennsylvanias farm and orchard products.

Bureau of Foods, taking over the department formerly in charge of the dairy and food commissioner. This bureau has charge of the enforcement of the pure food laws of the state, storage laws, etc.

Bureau of Markets, having charge of market reports standardization of farm products and containers, advocates uniform marketing system, etc.

Bureau of Chemistry, having charge of all feeding stuffs, insecticides, fertilizers, etc., sold in the state. Analyzes samples and has charge of enforcement of laws covering sale of same.

Bureau of Statistics, issuing monthly crop and livestock reports and monthly annual statistics covering every department of agriculture in each county of the state.

"BIG STORE" STYLE SHOW REVELATION TO LADIES OF CITY

Leitzinger Bros. "Big Store" was packed to the doors Saturday evening last, the occasion being the closing of their three day spring style show, which has long been a feature looked forward to by Clearfield shoppers.

In addition to the splendid attraction provided by the extensive line and variety of pretty and up-to-the minute stylish things they wisely piled and stored in grandeur confusion from one end to the other of this mammoth establishment, the Susquehanna College of Music orchestra rendered a delightful musical program during the evening.

The handsome decorations and special lighting effects added greatly to the beauty of the scene while the immense crowd of pleased and happy shoppers which thronged the store all evening expressed themselves as being highly pleased with all they saw and heard.

The immensity of the "Big Store" with its almost 60,000 square feet of floor space, cannot be adequately described in this brief story, but must be seen to be appreciated. We saw it all but the millinery department, and to get in there we didn't have a chance. Then, too, from the manner in which hundreds of pleased women were gyrating about from sales stand to mirror with hat plus flashing in, about and around on every hand, in that especial haven of femininity, we valued life and limb too much to even attempt it. Suffice it to say that this feature of the evening was the "real feature" of the last day of the style show and Messrs. Boyle and Barnard, with their big corps of capable assistants, had the time of their lives attempting to display just a small part of the myriads of real sensational millinery creations destined for Clearfield's stylish dressers the coming season.

Some sight, believe me, kid.

R. G. Ross is ill at his home on Locust street.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE URGES BUYING CHEAPER CUT MEATS

The Department of Justice announced today that it intends to begin within a few weeks an intensive educational campaign designed to cut the consumer's meat bill materially.

The plan to be used has been tested by the Department in several places in order that its economic soundness might be demonstrated. It is expected that the efforts of the Department will have the co-operation of retail meat dealers throughout the country as well as the co-operation of the whole packing industry, including several hundred different companies.

The Department will attempt to show the consumer the advantage of turning away from the high-priced cuts of meat, where the demand is now concentrated, to the less costly cuts, which constitutes the bulk of the meat animal and which, when correctly prepared, are of high nutritive value and great palatability.

This plan early received the sanction of numerous retailers—both individuals and association officials. Hundreds of wholesalers and packing companies throughout the country have now agreed to co-operate.

The economic theory upon which the Department is proceeding has been corroborated by other governmental agencies in close touch with marketing conditions. After an investigation of these conditions and experiments in limited localities, the Department of Justice finds this situation existing with reference to the purchase meats retail:

Those cuts of meat which are in heaviest demand—so-called choice steaks and rib roasts—constitute less than one-fourth of the steer. This concentration of demand on the portions which are available in the least quantity, has driven up the price of the very cuts which are most popular.

Failure to take advantage of the less costly cuts seems due to two factors; lack of knowledge concerning the preparation of the inexpensive pieces, and lack of information and indifference on the part of the housekeeper as to the high nutritive value and palatability of such portions.

As a consequence good meat at low prices is dragging in the market, while meat from the same animal which is no more nourishing but is four times as costly is in great demand. For example, recent wholesale quotations from the western market show that the best grade short loins (whence come fine steaks) have been selling wholesale as high as 69 cents a pound; while the best grade chucks from the identical steer have been selling at 15 cents. The chuck portion was raised on the same feed as the loin portion. It would yield nutritious steaks, tasty roasts, pot roasts, stews and corned beef.

Table d'hote luncheon menus very clearly show that the metropolitan hotels have learned the advantage of using inexpensive cuts. The great majority of the meat dishes in the table d'hote luncheons of many well-known hotels and restaurants are made from inexpensive cuts. Husbands order and enjoy luncheon portions of meat which their wives rarely or never buy for the home table.

The housewife holds in her own hand the remedy for very high meat prices. By turning away from the expensive to the inexpensive cuts she not only will lower her own meat bills, but will drive down the price of the choice cuts; furthermore, she will make it possible for meat to be merchandized more economically. With the present unequal demand for the various cuts at retail, some meat is diverted to other than its natural uses and other meat is wasted. This loss is ultimately borne by the consumer.

The Department of Justice purposes with the aid of the consumer to correct this situation. Fair Price Commissioners in every state will be asked to direct and take part in the campaign of education. The matter will be brought to the attention of civic clubs and women's organizations. Retailers, wholesalers, and packing companies throughout the country will be asked to appoint conference committees to co-operate with the Fair Price Commissioners. Recipes, charts and posters will be prepared and distributed widely. Specific weeks will be designated in various parts of the country for featuring the inexpensive cuts.

The Department of Justice will keep a close eye on market conditions to make sure that the consumer receives good meat at low prices, and that, if the consumer turns to the cheaper cuts, no illicit profit shall be taken thereon. Equalization of demand should make for better merchandising and a lower level of prices. At the present time hindquarters of beef are selling for 10 cents a pound more than the forequarters of beef. Many persons seem to want the meat which can be prepared with the least trouble—regardless of price.

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache is a sign you have been eating too much meat, which forms uric acid.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad, you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.

Why Not Try A Little "Want Ad"

Are there "Big Profits" in the Telephone Business?

FOR twenty years the operations of The Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania have never afforded the owners of the property more than a reasonable return on a good, sound, conservative investment.

This is not a Company that has been marked by frenzied finance. On the contrary, there is not a drop of so-called water in our capitalization.

It has created no great fortunes.

Because the Company is big, many people think it has made "all sorts of money" and is still making it.

The fact is—as the published records show—that fancy dividends have always given way to good plant maintenance, adequate reserves against depreciation and common-sense stability of the business.

That's what good service depends on!

At the present time those essential elements are facing serious danger. There are not revenues enough to meet our necessities. And unless adequate rates are forthcoming, and quickly, the outcome is obvious—a service dangerously impaired and a property which, because of the uncertainty of continued returns, will not attract new capital for improvements and extensions.

Women And The HOME ACCOUNT

Because women usually conduct the home finances, and because the beginning of thrift is in the home, it is well for them to link their plans with a good bank.

A bank account for the home relieves the house-wife of having correct change, sending and risking cash, disputes over accounts, etc. Pay by check—it's the better way.

Come here. We think our bank is a good bank for women and the home account.

Her Grandma Used Sage Tea To Darken Her Hair.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful. This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

COURT NOTES

John C. Arnold, Esq., acted the part of "Killjoy" in the Clearfield county courts on Saturday, when he filed three separate divorce actions, on behalf of as many mismated couples.

In the first case Stella F. Reid, of Curwensville, asked a divorce from her husband David Reid, for the very good reason that when he married her on August 20, 1917, David already had a wife and two wee bairns in Fife, Scotland. The statement sets forth that Reid was married in Scotland June 7, 1912, and not only failed to mention that fact to the complainant before he married her, but had also neglected to secure the proper and necessary legal right to acquire a second wife.

Helen K. Shultz asks a divorce from Theodore Shultz after a married life extending from January 8, 1911, to August 3, 1919. Cruel and barbarous treatment is the reason advanced for the action.

I. J. Duke wants a divorce from his wife Sue B. Duke, whom he married May 5, 1898, and who deserted him July 15, 1918.

Attorneys E. J. Boose, James A. Gleason and L. D. McCall, of DuBois, transacted legal business at the Court House today.

DUBOIS GIRLS DEFEATED CLEARFIELD

United States' Land Best.

British America, which consists of Canada, Newfoundland and a number of islands, has an area of 3,750,000 square miles, while the total area of the United States and its possessions is 3,743,446 square miles. Thus Britain has a little more territory, but it is largely so far north as to be of comparatively little value.

Snakes' Changes of Skin.

It appears that snakes change their skins several times a year before reaching the adult state. The main reason why snakes cast their skins is to provide for increased growth. The skin of a snake does not grow with the growth of the body, as is the case with warm blooded creatures. So when it begins to get too tight it is discarded.

NEWS OF OUR NEIGHBORS

CURWENSVILLE

Mail carrier Ed. Benson was off duty a few days on account of illness last and part of this week. Raymond Wingert, a clerk in the postoffice, substituted for him.

A number of persons who were converted at the revival meetings in the M. E. church several months ago, were admitted to full membership during the services on Sabbath forenoon.

Don. Miller, of Grampian, visited the High School one day last week and distributed to the boy scouts copies of the game forestry laws, with an admonition to read and study them carefully during the summer months

The ice has gone out of Anderson Creek and did little or no damage in its passage down the stream to the river. The ice was very thick and heavy, more so than it has been on this stream for a number of years past. The ice on the river is from two to three feet in thickness, and should it break and go out with a rush and high water, it is feared that great damage to people living along the river banks will result.

The entire family of Joseph Bunnell, residing out along the Bailey Road, is down with the influenza, with the exception of the husband and father.

Hugh Gallagher has disposed of his handsome new dwelling house, situate on North Filbert street, to Frank Hastings, who will take possession of the same on or about the first of April. It is not Mr. Galagher's intention to remove from Curwensville, and his only reason for selling was that the house was too large for his present family.

The Curwensville Herald, through the writings of one of the publicity committee connected with the Industrial and Community Association, prints the inspiring news that "a shirt factory is practically assured for Curwensville." A section of a paragraph in the article says: "'For reasons best known to the association it is impossible to divulge the name of the concern at present, but that Curwensville is about to come face to face with a proposition that should have the united support of every citizen." So say we all. The article further says that "It is squarely up to us to prove our loyalty as good citizens of Curwensville to put every sinew and nucleus at our command to cultivate these hidden springs of fortune so that they may bear the fruits that each and every resident is entitled to share in." We say amen to that. Yet we will say this free and aboveboard and without fear of contradictions from any sensible thinking man, that the greatest need of Curwensville today is dwelling houses somewhere to lodge people and make them comfortable when they do come to our town. One day last week the writer heard six inquiries made: "Where can I get a house. I would like to move here." Five of these inquiries came from people who reside in other towns. And there you are. We have been accused of writing articles that were detrimental to the town's interest. In fact we were taken to the task about it one day last week on the street. We inquired around among some the business men and a lot of other good citizens, if they had ever read anything that we had written which would prove the assertion and one and all answered that they had not. If a shirt factory can be landed, well and good, and from what we learned the other day from a young man who is on the ground floor, we were assured that the factory was a sure thing, and when ready for operation would employ a large number of girls.

Dick Lantz, who has been employed at the Crescent Refractories company brick yard at this place for the past two years, or perhaps longer, has resigned his position and accepted the agency of the Equitable Life Insurance society, for this district. Dick is a good "mixer" among the workingmen and a hustler and will no doubt make good in his new vocation. He has the best wishes of his many friends, at any rate.

Charles Heitzenrather, of this place and Miss Della Bowman, of Olanta, Pike township, were united in marriage one day about the middle of last week, the ceremony being performed at Clearfield. The newlyweds expect to reside in Curwensville, the groom being an employee of the Penn Public Service company.

Mrs. Harry Bilger was taken seriously ill at her home on North Pine street last Friday. At this writing she is slowly recovering.

At a recent meeting of Joshua Sipes Post, American Legion, No. 505, a resolution was passed thanking the Rescue Hose and Ladder company for the use of their rooms in the Public building and for other favors tendered the Post while in preparation or organization.

Mr. Richards and daughter, Miss Grila, and Mrs. Calvin Walters and two sons, William and Furman, all of Altoona, spent last Saturday with Mrs. Furman Tate, a sister of Mrs. Walters.

W. P. Tate is visiting his sister-in-law, Mrs. Jennie Tate, in Mahaffey.

AN INSIDE BATH MAKES YOU LOOK AND FEEL FRESH

Says a glass of hot water with phosphate before breakfast keeps illness away.

Physicians the world over recommend the inside bath, declaring this is of vastly more importance than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing ill health, while the pores in the ten yards of bowels do.

Men and women are urged to drink each morning, before breakfast, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of helping to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible material, poisons, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the alimentary canal before eating more food.

Those who wake up with bad breath, coated tongue, nasty taste or have a dull aching head, sallow complexion, acid stomach; others who have bilious attacks or constipation, should obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little but is sufficient to show the value of inside bathing.

PUBLIC SALE

The undersigned will sell at public sale at the Brett farm on Woodland state road, on the afternoon of Wednesday, arch 17th, the following described personal property: Team of horses, onklin wagon, and harness, level and side hill plows, spring tooth harrow, fresh cow, chickens, corn fodder, oats, straw, ear corn, two cutting boxes and other articles too numerous to mention.

We Kept Our Trains Moving—

IT was January of the critical year 1918. Russia had gone Bolshevik and was negotiating a disastrous peace with the Teutons. Italy was struggling to recover from a defeat which left hundreds of square miles of territory in the hands of the enemy. French and British forces had to be diverted to her help. German newspapers were bragging that the U-boats were sinking more than 800,000 tons of shipping each month. The German High Command was preparing for the greatest thrust of the war. France was able to give her people only five slices of bread a day. Great Britain was undergoing a food crisis. Officials of the Allies were imploring America for munitions, food and men. Lord Rhondda, Food Controller of Great Britain, cabled to Washington:

"Unless America can increase in January the quantity of supplies sent in December, I am unwilling to guarantee that the allied nations can hold out."

OVER here there was a coal famine, with heatless days, lightless nights, gasless Sundays and workless Mondays. The worst blizzard in fifty years, accompanied by weather below zero, had overwhelmed the country. More than 200 ships lay idle in New York Harbor, waiting to carry supplies to our Allies. The railroads were so badly congested that a freight embargo had to be declared on all but materials essential to the prosecution of the war. The ruin of civilization impended if foodstuffs could not be moved.

We kept our trains moving in spite of the weather. Our cars carried a good proportion of the food and munitions and coal needed to win the war. It was a victory over the worst conditions of a generation.

What our lines did in that emergency, we can do again and for the same reason. We have the morale, the men and the tracks necessary for serving the public even under extreme difficulties.

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

Only A Limited Number of Ford Cars

There are mighty good reasons why you should buy your Ford car now. But the biggest one is that there are only so many Ford cars—just a specific limited number—alloted to this territory. Those who buy their cars now will be wise. They will have them to use whenever they wish.

Don't put it off—next spring, even next month, is an uncertainty. We cannot take orders for spring delivery. Even now, we must have signed bona-fide orders before our monthly allotment is shipped us. So the only way for you to be sure of getting a Ford car, is to order it now. Get your name on an order. It is your protection.

Again we tell you, the allotment for this territory is limited and you must buy now while deliveries are possible. As ever, the demand for Ford cars is away in advance of production. So, it's first come, first served. Spring, summer, autumn and winter are all the same to the Ford car. It is a valuable servant every day of the year. Rain or shine, it is ready for your demands. Buy now and get prompt delivery. You won't have to store it. You can use it. Buy now while the buying is possible.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—In a base hospital at Meully, France, his face disfigured beyond recognition, an American soldier serving in the French army attracts attention by his deep despondency. Asked by the surgeons for a photograph to guide them in making over his face, he offers in derision a picture of the Savior, bidding them take that as a model. They do so, making a remarkable likeness.

CHAPTER II—Invalided home, on the boat he meets Martin Harmon, New York broker, who is attracted by his remarkable features. The ex-soldier gives his name as "Henry Hilliard," and his home as Syracuse, New York. He left there under a cloud, and is embittered against his former fellow townsmen. Harmon makes him a proposition to sell mining stocks in Syracuse, concealing his identity. He accepts it, seeing in it a chance to make good and prove he has been underestimated.

CHAPTER III—In Syracuse "Hilliard" (in reality Richard Morgan) is accepted as a stranger. He visits James Cullen, a former employer, relating a story of the death of Richard Morgan, and is surprised at the regret shown by Cullen and his youthful daughter Angela. While at the Cullen home Carol Durant, Morgan's former fiancee, makes a call.

CHAPTER IV.—Hilliard repeats to Carol his story of Morgan's death and is deeply moved by the evidence of her deep feeling for the supposed dead man. He resolves, however, to continue the deception.

CHAPTER V—Next day Hilliard gathers from Angela that Carol had always loved Dick Morgan, and while delivering to her a letter supposedly from her former fiancee realizes that his affection is unchanged. His welcome by Doctor Durant, Carol's father, also shakes his resolution to continue the deception, but he conquers it.

CHAPTER VI.—In Syracuse Hilliard is looked upon as a capitalist and mining expert, and in that capacity, in pursuance of his object, interests Cullen in the possibility of wealth in mining properties. The Cullens and Hilliard go to the Durant home for dinner.

CHAPTER VII—Observations at the Durants' convince Hilliard that the doctor and his daughter had always been his true friends, and his love for Carol becomes stronger. He realizes he has a dangerous rival in Jack Armstrong, also very much in love with Carol, and the two men tacitly agree to fight it out fairly.

CHAPTER VIII.—Despite his success in interesting capitalists of Syracuse in his mining venture (which he believes to be a sound proposition) Hilliard regrets having placed himself in such a false position, but in justice to Harmon feels he must go on. He makes confession to Carol of his love for her, and she admits the possibility of his affection being returned in time.

CHAPTER IX—Rufus Waring, youthful suitor of Angela Cullen, jealous of Hilliard, becomes angrily watchful of the latter's business. Harmon visits Syracuse, and a prominent business man of the city, seeing them together, warns Hilliard of Harmon's reputation. Disturbed, Hilliard asks Harmon for an explanation, and the broker unguardedly admits a former swindle, and also that the mining proposition is a "fake." Hilliard threatens to make the knowledge public, but Harmon shows him he has made himself an accessory. Hilliard sees nothing to do but go on with the deals.

CHAPTER X—In an interview with Carol, deeply touched by her friendliness and interest in him, Hilliard almost determines to admit his duplicity, plead for forgiveness, and make a fresh start, but cannot nerve himself to the confession.

CHAPTER XI.

H. If way down James street, Hilliard, driving his runabout in utter disregard of the traffic rules, was reliving, moment by moment, and word by word, the conversations of the earlier evening. He had gone to Carol with the sturdy intention of behaving himself manfully and in detail, but in the doctor's study he had perceived another, and what seemed to him a more unselfish method of achieving the same end. He had fancied that if he could preserve intact the memory of Dicky Morgan, if he could prevent the world—and especially that part of it personal to the Cullens and Durants—from knowing what a despicable thing it was that Dick Morgan had done, he could save a modicum of pain for those who would otherwise be most affected. This conception had interfered to make his talk with Carol somewhat aimless . . . he had been under the dual necessity of damning Hilliard without implicating Morgan. And how bunglingly he had accomplished it! How needlessly—how unsuccessfully!

Or impulse, he checked the speed of the car and swerved to the left; he was actuated by a sudden desire to run over to the University club and see Armstrong. He had no definite plan as to what he should say or do, he merely craved to meet his rival face to face, and have it out with him. Man to man—and this time there should be no bungling.

Mr. Armstrong, it seemed was in the library . . . and would come down directly. Indeed he followed almost on the heels of the messenger.

"Why, hello, Hilliard," he said rather stiffly. "Did you want to see me? That's too bad—I've got to leave here in just a couple of seconds to catch my train. I'm going West tonight."

"I'll take you over," said Hilliard, shortly. "That'll save you a minute or two—and give us time to chat. My car's outside."

"Why—under the circumstances . . ." Armstrong's glance was diverted. "I don't think I can let you do that—take me over, I mean. I'm going West on a business trip and I don't think it would be very appropriate for you to—"

"Oh—you are?" Hilliard felt streaks of ice coursing along his spine. "How far West?"

Armstrong consulted his watch nervously.

"Hilliard," he said, "I like to do things out in the open. There are just two reasons why I don't think you really want to invite me to ride down to the station with you. If I'm wrong, it's up to you to say so. One of 'em is that Rufus Waring has asked me to stop off at Butte—I'm going a good deal further than that—and look up some matters for him. I guess you know as well as I do what they are. . . ."

Hilliard fumbled his hat. "I see. And—the other reason?"

Armstrong suddenly straightened; and his voice had a curious ring to it—a ring which electrified Hilliard and awoke the most petrifying alarms within him.

"But does one ordinarily mention—certain kinds of people—in a men's club? I don't know how it is where you come from—but here, we don't."

Hilliard smiled rapidly; it was the utmost perversity of emotion, for he knew now why Carol had been so explicit in her sympathy . . . why she had been so meticulous to let him realize that she wanted him as a friend; only as a friend . . . and here was Armstrong, concealing with difficulty the triumph he was hiding at . . .

"No" he said harshly. "One doesn't, but there isn't anything to keep us from mentioning anybody we like outside the club, is there?"

"Why—not that I—"

"Then I'll take you down anyway," said Hilliard. "And let's see if we can't try to understand each other."

It took a brave man to accept the offer for Hilliard's eyes held little to recommend their owner as a prudent driver, or as a very pleasant companion. Armstrong however, was already putting on his hat.

They had driven over to the station in silence. Hilliard parking the runabout carefully, turned to his passenger.

"We've got ten good minutes," he said, "Your train isn't even in yet—go ahead and talk."

Armstrong, after a momentary delay, put out a conciliating hand. "Old man," he said, "let's play the rest of this out like two sensible people. We won't get anywhere by bickering and I suppose it won't do any harm for us to put all the cards on the table, and know exactly where we stand. Of course, you haven't known me very long, and I haven't known you . . . but suppose, just to help along the understanding, we take each other at face value."

Hilliard winced.

"Well—suppose we do. Then what?"

"Then you can't hold it up against me for stopping off at Butte on my way out. I haven't any motive in it—I promised to do it as a favor to Rufe Waring. It isn't a personal issue at all. I know exactly how it must appear to you but . . . I'm not that sort of man, Hilliard. I wouldn't have dreamed of it myself. That's straight!"

The masquerader regarded him earnestly—and yielded to his evident sincerity.

"Way down deep," he said, at length, "I know you're not, but . . . what's

"What's That For?"

that for?" He referred to Armstrong's outstretched hand. "Oh! . . . all right." They shook hands solemnly. "At the same time it would have been so perfectly natural for you to feel like getting whatever leverage you could—"

"There's no need of that—now," said Armstrong. His smile was proud and brilliant, and Hilliard withered under it.

"Well I wasn't sure."

"I don't deny," said Armstrong slowly, "that at first sight this is a queer thing for me to do—to check up your property. I mean—when you and I have had such an intimate relationship as opponents. And I wouldn't for the world have agreed to it if it could have had the slightest connection with with your own private affairs. It hasn't—it can't have. I give you my word on that; it's been settled without the slightest reference to anything else. But since it hasn't, and since Rufus asked me as a favor—and promised to tell you about it—and it's absolutely commercial—"

"That's enough. I'm glad you're going to do it." Hilliard's voice was gruff; it was a tribute to his companion's code of ethics. "Know anything about mining?"

"Not a thing. But I'm to go to a law firm in Butte—and of course it's only a formality, anyway. I'll probably find it's better than you ever claimed. But Rufe asked me."

"I see. Well—now about this other matter . . ."

Armstrong was watching the westbound express as it felt its cautious way through Railroad avenue to the station.

"Yes?"

Hilliard was suddenly ashamed of himself, he was forced to concede that his rival had the advantage of him in poise and altruism. He shook himself free of the savage resentment which was stealing upon him.

"We're only human—both of us. Perhaps—under the circumstances—the best thing we can say is to say nothing . . . except that I wish you all the luck in the world. I don't pretend it isn't a hard thing to say—but I'm trying to mean it. And you certainly deserve it."

"And to you," said Armstrong cheerfully. "And no bad feelings on either side. And I hope your mine makes a million dollars for you."

"Thanks," said Hilliard, grimly. "I'll need it. But don't be afraid to send Rufus your honest opinion—will you?"

"No—and I'll send it to you, too. That's only fair. . . . I'd better be starting."

They shook hands again across the wheel.

"You're a good sport, Armstrong . . . don't think I've got any resentment left . . . except a bit that I can't quite swallow on short notice . . ."

"I know. But you don't need to worry, old man. Your future's bright enough—as I hope to wire Rufus about Saturday."

Too late, Hilliard perceived that they were talking at cross purposes—Armstrong was evidently thinking about the mine. But there was time only for a last gesture of farewell; and Armstrong had disappeared in the depths of the trainshed. Armstrong . . . the victor, and the inquisitioner . . . was on the road to Butte!

Work, hard work, the panacea and the salvation of those who are sore distressed, even this cheapest relief was denied Hilliard. He was left alone with his problem, wrestling with it once more in the black darkness of despondency, and knowing neither a means of simplifying it, nor a counselor to whom he could turn for aid.

He conceded that there was only one thing for him to do, and he intended to do it, but he was harassed because he had so much time to think about it. Not since the first sickening shock of Harmon's revelation had he doubted his own purpose; it was merely the machinery of it which perplexed him. His confidence in himself gradually returned; he was abnormally calm and determined; he had no more idea of resisting his impulses than he would have had, in Flanders, of disobeying his orders. The thing was there to be done, and he, regardless of his own future, was there to do it.

Overnight, he had occupied himself with some elementary accounting.

With Harmon's check, his outstanding balance for expenses, and what money he could raise by selling his runabout and a few personal possessions, he had on hand a matter of ninety-six hundred dollars; Syracuse had entrusted him with sixty-two thousand. To compromise pro rata with his creditors—this was apparently his only resource, and yet how insufficient a reparation it was! He knew that it had been his duty to investigate the Montana property before he began to exploit it; he knew that his self-introduction to Syracuse had been blatantly inexcusable, and that not even the fact that he had been carried away by the drama of it could ever be excused. His intricate fabric of deception, now that he inspected it from this different viewpoint, was flimsy—shoddy. He could be traced—if anyone cared to spend the time, and the energy, if Armstrong—or Rufus Waring—cared to spend it, for example. Of course there was always the refuge of flight but in Flanders men learn not to desert their posts, and Hilliard had learned that lesson among the first. Loyalty to the cause of fighting had grown automatic; flight was simply inconceivable to him.

Yes he could gather his resources and place them, together with himself, in the hands of his subscribers, and their vengeance would be twofold: once for their loss out of pocket, once for the loss out of faith. He had deserved no leniency, and he expected none. But as for those who, without the financial entanglement, had respected him, and honored him, as for Carol Durant and Angela . . .

Well as for Carol he was at least relieved of the terrific mental convulsion which would surely have fallen upon him if he had had reason to believe that she loved him. As it was her shock at his disaster would be tempered by Armstrong's sane philosophy at most she would lose in Hilliard a friend of only a few months—a man she had wanted to retain as a friend, but—by her own admission—as that and no more. This was a consolation trifling and fragile, to be sure but something saved out of the wreck.

As to Armstrong—Hilliard, marveling somewhat at his own tolerance, wished him joy. Armstrong was fine and clean and manly; he had well merited his victory. As to Mr Cullen—Hilliard was torn with regret, but

How to Keep House Without a Maid

Housemaids are becoming fewer. More than ever it is devolving upon womankind to conduct household affairs without help.

"Today the shortage of domestic help is more acute than it ever was," writes W. L. George, an able writer on home topics. "This shortage has been growing for the last thirty years, ever since factories began to absorb women—and there is no sign of improvement."

If you have had trouble in finding a maid or laundress; if you are in this readjustment period, you will find our laundry service highly helpful.

It is a modern service. Our man takes up your family bundle at a definite time each week. We sort the things that come to us, and wash each class of goods separately—hosiery is only washed with hosiery; table linen only with table linen.

You will approve also of our laundering process. Not the washboard, but mellow, soft water, and creamy suds of a pure soap are what we use. It is a method much more beneficial for the clothes than the old way of the laundress.

We iron everything, also—give it that snowy whiteness, and immaculate finish that fastidious housewives so much desire.

We can make your housework much lighter. And the cost is small. Telephone us and our driver will call for your family washing.

after all, Cullen's gullibility was what had made the campaign so childishly simple. As to Angela . . . who had really loved him . . .

"Oh, the poor little kid!" said Hilliard softly. "The poor little kid. . . ."

And perhaps he had never loved Carol Durant so much as when, at ten o'clock that sunny morning, he went up the steps of Angela's house to destroy a little girl's regard for him before it could be destroyed by others.

On the doorstep, he found strength in the memory of poor Pierre Dutout. In a way, Hilliard felt that he, too, was giving up his life as Dutout had given his . . . with a smile for the fate, and a blessing for the future. Because he was afraid, unnervedly afraid, that Angela, after all, was in love with him—and when he put a stop to that, it was the beginning of the end.

War Taxes Must Be Continued Say Leaders Of Both Houses

McAdoo Plan of Reducing Tax And Raising Bond Issue Is Highly Impracticable And Perilous

NO RFDUCTIONS CAN BE MADE

WASHINGTON, March 8—War taxes must be continued, Republican and Democratic leaders in the House in charge of revenue legislation declared today. No reductions will be made by Congress this year, they assert. Republican Leader Mondell and Democratic leader Kitchin framer of the present tax laws, join in saying that the proposal of former Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo for a billion dollar reduction in taxes and the floating of a large bond issue to make up for the losses is impossible at this time and would imperil the whole financial structure of the nation.

Court Decision On Taxing Stock Dividends Causes Wild Market

1920 REVENUE ACT INVALID

WASHINGTON, March 8—The Supreme Court today held unconstitutional the 1920 revenue act providing for levying income taxes on stocks dividends.

NEW YORK, March 8.—The stock market was thrown into the utmost confusion this afternoon by conflicting reports from several sources on the decision of the United States Supreme Court on stock dividend taxes. The first dispatches reaching the floor of the exchange were that the dividends were taxable and before these were corrected and it was known that the court held they were not taxable, there was a fever of selling. Big blocks of stock were put out for short account and those on the long lists threw their holdings overboard. All of the New York ticker services carried erroneous reports.

Crucible Steel, affected more than any other by the decision, broke from 196 to 191 on the early dispatches and then went to 25 within ten minutes. General Motors broke from 275 to 264 and then rallied to 279 1-2, a new high for the day. Brokers on the floor reported that they were unable to take care of the orders, except in Crucible, American Woolen and Baldwin.

At 1:30 p. m. General Motors soared to 290 up 31 1-4 points. United States Steel opened at 97 off 1-2, Crucible at 196 1-2 off 3-8, Republic at 88 1-2 off 7-8. Studebaker at 86 3-4 off 5-8, United States Rubber at 101 3-4 off 1-2, and Mexican Petroleum at 176 3-4 off 1, Westinghouse at 51 1-2 off 1-2, Midvale 46 5-8.

A slump in Sterling exchange, as great as its sensational rise, was indicated today when the British Exchange opened at 3.55, a drop of 5 1-4 cents from Saturday's close.

ICE FLOOD DAMAGE CONFINED TO BRIDGES

Aside from the destruction of the Deer Creek and Rollingstone bridges no further damage is reported from down the river by Saturday's brief but destructive ice flood. The quick change in the weather undoubtedly saved a much greater property loss.

As was stated in The Progress on Saturday the ice which had come out of Clearfield creek and the other small streams along the river had jammed at several points between ere and Deer Creek and when Thursday night's rain raised the upper river and creek so rapidly the flood was more in the nature of an old-time spring "splash."

There is a large body of deep dead water below the Deer Creek bridge and the ice at this point by reason of that fact and the severe winter was exceptionally heavy. There was not enough water there Friday morning to start this heavy bed of ice and the result was when the upriver flood reached this point it was unable to force its way through and a jam quickly formed. The ice piled up and the river rose so rapidly that it soon reached a point but two feet below the high water mark of the June flood of 1889.

The current carried the flow over to the Cooper township side of the bridge and the ice piled up until it lifted half the bridge off its foundations. The span on that side toppled over onto the ice and the added weight of the bridge was sufficient to start the jam to moving and it swept on down around "Uncle Pete's Point" through the rapids below.

The bridge rode on top of the ice the intervening five or six miles to Rollingstone and simply swept that bridge 360 feet long off both pier and abutments and both bridges then continued on with the flood for a considerable distance before lodging.

From reports received by the County Commissioners thus far they are of the opinion the remaining half of Deer Creek bridge can be made fit for travel and it will be only necessary to replace the one span. Whether or not it will be possible to salvage and restore the Rollingstone bridge has not yet been determined and cannot be until the final location and condition of the wreck is learned.

LOCAL YOUNG MAN VICTIM OF PNEUMONIA

Charles Cuetara died at his home on Pine street at 4 o'clock this morning of pneumonia, following an attack of influenza. The deceased suffered a severe attack of influenza about three weeks ago and was quite sick for a time. He had so far recovered as to be able to be about last week. He was up town on Wednesday and Thursday, but during Thursday evening he developed pneumonia and his case became serious from the start. Despite the best of care and attention he grew rapidly worse, until the end this morning.

Charley Cuetera was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cuetara, and was born and raised in Clearfield. He was an expert painter and paper hanger and was employed by D. W. Speck for a number of years. He was an industrious, upright young man of genial disposition, and his sudden death was a sad shock to his host of friends.

He was about 45 years of age and is survived by two brothers and four sisters, as follows: Frank and John Cuetara, Mrs. F. X. Shillen and Mrs. W. E. Murphy, of Clearfield; Mrs. K. A. Fleming, of Washington, D. C.; Mrs. John Malone, of Chicago.

HEALTH OFFICER AT ALTOONA

Thomas G. Herbert, a former Clearfielder, was elected Health Officer of Altoona on Friday night last by the City Council. Mr. Herbert formerly held that position for many years, but was the victim of a political change a few years ago and lost out for a time. His local friends will be pleased to hear of Tom's comeback.

Hazard Murray has returned from a business trip to Philadelphia.

MORNING TRAIN CANNOT BE CHANGED

Superintendent Johnson In Letter To The Progress Says It Is Impossible

PENNSY DOING BEST IT CAN

The Progress having been informed that it was possible to have the morning train on the Pennsylvania railroad arrive in Clearfield from Tyrone a couple of hours earlier than the present schedule, which gets in here at 11:15, took the matter up with Supt. J. K. Johnson by letter on Friday last. We were advised by several business men that the morning mail trains both east and west, arrived in Tyrone before 7:30 a. m., and it was hoped that if this information were correct, the branch train could be started from Tyrone by 7:30 and thus give Clearfield business men an extra two hours in which to take care of their mail and get their necessary replies off in the first afternoon mail.

The following reply from Supt. Johnston shows that to be impossible and that the Pennsy is giving us the very best service possible under conditions as they really exist

The Clearfield Progress,
Clearfield, Pa.

Dear Sir:

Replying to your letter of the 5th instant, in which you ask if it would be possible for us to change the leaving time of our morning Clearfield branch passenger train from 8:45 a. m. to 7:30 a. m.

You state that if it were possible to make this change, it would be a decided advantage to the business interests of Clearfield and other towns along the branch, in that it would give them an opportunity to take care of their mail and get replies through in time to utilize the mails going out after dinner, etc. This, however, would not be the case. If we were to advance the time of train 6402 to 7:30 a. m., this train would miss all main line connections at Tyrone both east and west, in which case the mail would not reach your district until the afternoon train, No. 6404, leaving Tyrone at 4:15 p. m. Under the present arrangement of the main line schedules, we are scarcely able to get No. 6402 out on time and secure all connections at Tyrone.

From an operating standpoint it would be desirable to start this train from Tyrone earlier, but under the present method of operation and the time main line connections reach us, it would be practically impossible to make this cange.

Yours truly,
J. W. JOHNSTON,
Sperintendent

WILLIAM HARRISON BUCKWALTER

LEGAL BATTLE ON "DRY" LAW OPENED BY ROOT

WASHINGTON, March 8—The validity of constitutional prohibition will be fought out in a legal battle of attorneys for the federal government, the dry states, the wet states and the liquor interests in the United States Supreme Court today. A decision is not expected to be made before April or later.

One of the greatest fights ever made on any statute or part of the constitution has been begun again the dry states by the wet forces. The issue today centered on whether prohibition is a valid subject for an amendment to the constitution and whether the Volstead act enforcing the amendment is constitutional. Practically twenty-five angles of attacks have been lodged against the two.

The line up in court today finds Rhode Island vigorously contesting constitutional prohibition while opposition to it are the federal government, 21 prohibition states represented by Chas. E. Hughes and the Anti-Saloon League. New Jersey will ask the court for permission to bring a suit similar to that of Rhode Island.

As the court met Elihu Root obtained permission to file a brief from the United States Brewers' Association supporting the contention of Rhode Island. Root said "the passage of the so-called 18th amendment is not within the authority vested in Congress. The so-called 18th amendment has not been ratified by three-fourths of the states."

TWO COSTLY FIRES AT DUBOIS WITH $20,000 LOSS YESTERDAY MORNING

Within a few hours of each other two disastrous fires occurred in DuBois yesterday, one at 11:15 o'clock in the morning and the other at 6:15 o'clock in the evening. The origin of neither fire is definitely known. The first fire partially destroyed the complete bakery of William Pistner on South Franklin street and the second one destroyed a barn and two dwellings belonging to John Schrecogost o South Jared street. A strong wind was blowing during the progress of the fires and it was only by the utmost endeavors that the firemen held the loss to the estimated $20,000 loss. The firemen fought against great disadvantages in both instances, water plugs being frozen and their efforts are to be commended.

REORGANIZATION OF DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

HARRISBURG, March 8—(United Press)—Frederick Rasmussen, secretary of the Pennsylvania Department of agriculture, announced today the reorganization of that department provided for under an Act of 1919, as completed.

Significant in the reorganization is the close co-operation of the Pennsylvania State College, United States Department of Agriculture, the county farm bureaus, state associations and other agricultural organizations.

The department is now divided into six bureaus, each in charge of a director, responsible to Secretary Rasmussen, the work of each centering in an administrative office. These bureaus work as a unit with the federal and state organizations. The six bureaus and the duties attached thereto are:

Bureau of Animal Industry, carrying on the work of the old livestock sanitary board. It provides for quarantine enforcement and disease control and eradication of all animal diseases.

Bureau of Plant Industry, taking over the work of the old economic zoologist. This bureau has charge of plant pest control, nursery inspection and deals with all diseases and pests afflicting Pennsylvanias farm and orchard products.

Bureau of Foods, taking over the department formerly in charge of the dairy and food commissioner. This bureau has charge of the enforcement of the pure food laws of the state, storage laws, etc.

Bureau of Markets, having charge of market reports standardization of farm products and containers, advocates uniform marketing system, etc.

Bureau of Chemistry, having charge of all feeding stuffs, insecticides, fertilizers, etc., sold in the state. Analyzes samples and has charge of enforcement of laws covering sale of same.

Bureau of Statistics, issuing monthly crop and livestock reports and monthly annual statistics covering every department of agriculture in each county of the state.

"BIG STORE" STYLE SHOW REVELATION TO LADIES OF CITY

Leitzinger Bros. "Big Store" was packed to the doors Saturday evening last, the occasion being the closing of their three day spring style show, which has long been a feature looked forward to by Clearfield shoppers.

In addition to the splendid attraction provided by the extensive line and variety of pretty and up-to-the minute stylish things they wisely piled and stored in graceful confusion from one end to the other of this mammoth establishment, the Susquehanna College of Music orchestra rendered a delightful musical program during the evening.

The handsome decorations and special lighting effects added greatly to the beauty of the scene while the immense crowd of pleased and happy shoppers which thronged the store all evening expressed themselves as being highly pleased with all they saw and heard.

The immensity of the "Big Store" with its almost 60,000 square feet of floor space, cannot be adequately described in this brief story, but must be seen to be appreciated. We saw it all but the millinery department, and to get in there we didn't have a chance. Then, too, from the manner in which hundreds of pleased women were gyrating about from sales stand to mirror with hat plus flashing in, about and around on every hand, in that especial haven of femininity, we valued life and limb too much to even attempt it. Suffice it to say that this feature of the evening was the "real feature" of the last day of the style show and Messrs. Boyle and Barnard, with their big corps of capable assistants, had the time of their lives attempting to display just a small part of the myriads of real sensational millinery creations destined for Clearfield's stylish dressers the coming season.

Some sight, believe me, kid.

R. G. Ross is ill at his home on Locust street.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE URGES BUYING CHEAPER CUT MEATS

The Department of Justice announced today that it intends to begin within a few weeks an intensive educational campaign designed to cut the consumer's meat bill materially.

The plan to be used has been tested by the Department in several places in order that its economic soundness might be demonstrated. It is expected that the efforts of the Department will have the co-operation of retail meat dealers throughout the country as well as the co-operation of the whole packing industry, including several hundred different companies.

The Department will attempt to show the consumer the advantage of turning away from the high-priced cuts of meat, where the demand is now concentrated, to the less costly cuts, which constitutes the bulk of the meat animal and which, when correctly prepared, are of high nutritive value and great palatability.

This plan early received the sanction of numerous retailers—both individuals and association officials. Hundreds of wholesalers and packing companies throughout the country have now agreed to co-operate.

The economic theory upon which the Department is proceeding has been corroborated by other governmental agencies in close touch with marketing conditions. After an investigation of these conditions and experiments in limited localities, the Department of Justice finds this situation existing with reference to the purchase meats retail:

Those cuts of meat which are in heaviest demand—so-called choice steaks and rib roasts—constitute less than one-fourth of the steer. This concentration of demand on the portions which are available in the least quantity, has driven up the price of the very cuts which are most popular.

Failure to take advantage of the less costly cuts seems due to two factors; lack of knowledge concerning the preparation of the inexpensive pieces, and lack of information and indifference on the part of the housekeeper as to the high nutritive value and palatability of such portions.

As a consequence good meat at low prices is dragging in the market, while meat from the same animal which is no more nourishing but is four times as costly is in great demand. For example, recent wholesale quotations from the western market show that the best grade short loins (whence come fine steaks) have been selling wholesale as high as 69 cents a pound; while the best grade chucks from the identical steer have been selling at 15 cents. The chuck portion was raised on the same feed as the loin portion. It would yield nutritious steaks, tasty roasts, pot roasts, stews and corned beef.

Table d'hote luncheon menus very clearly show that the metropolitan hotels have learned the advantage of using inexpensive cuts. The great majority of the meat dishes in the table d'hote luncheons of many well-known hotels and restaurants are made from inexpensive cuts. Husbands order and enjoy luncheon portions of meat which their wives rarely or never buy for the home table.

The housewife holds in her own hand the remedy for very high meat prices. By turning away from the expensive to the inexpensive cuts she not only will lower her own meat bills, but will drive down the price of the choice cuts; furthermore, she will make it possible for meat to be merchandized more economically. With the present unequal demand for the various cuts at retail, some meat is diverted to other than its natural uses and other meat is wasted. This loss is ultimately borne by the consumer.

The Department of Justice purposes with the aid of the consumer to correct this situation. Fair Price Commissioners in every state will be asked to direct and take part in the campaign of education. The matter will be brought to the attention of civic clubs and women's organizations. Retailers, wholesalers, and packing companies throughout the country will be asked to appoint conference committees to co-operate with the Fair Price Commissioners. Recipes, charts and posters will be prepared and distributed widely. Specific weeks will be designated in various parts of the country for featuring the inexpensive cuts.

The Department of Justice will keep a close eye on market conditions to make sure that the consumer receives good meat at low prices, and that, if the consumer turns to the cheaper cuts, no illicit profit shall be taken thereon. Equalization of demand should make for better merchandising and a lower level of prices. At the present time hindquarters of beef are selling for 10 cents a pound more than the forequarters of beef. Many persons seem to want the meat which can be prepared with the least trouble—regardless of price.

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache is a sign you have been eating too much meat, which forms uric acid.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad, you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.

Why Not Try A Little "Want Ad"

Are there "Big Profits" in the Telephone Business?

FOR twenty years the operations of The Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania have never afforded the owners of the property more than a reasonable return on a good, sound, conservative investment.

This is not a Company that has been marked by frenzied finance. On the contrary, there is not a drop of so-called water in our capitalization.

It has created no great fortunes.

Because the Company is big, many people think it has made "all sorts of money" and is still making it.

The fact is—as the published records show—that fancy dividends have always given way to good plant maintenance, adequate reserves against depreciation and common-sense stability of the business.

That's what good service depends on!

At the present time those essential elements are facing serious danger. There are not revenues enough to meet our necessities. And unless adequate rates are forthcoming, and quickly, the outcome is obvious—a service dangerously impaired and a property which, because of the uncertainty of continued returns, will not attract new capital for improvements and extensions.

Women And The HOME ACCOUNT

Because women usually conduct the home finances, and because the beginning of thrift is in the home, it is well for them to link their plans with a good bank.

A bank account for the home relieves the house-wife of having correct change, sending and risking cash, disputes over accounts, etc. Pay by check—it's the better way.

Come here. We think our bank is a good bank for women and the home account.

Her Grandma Used Sage Tea To Darken Her Hair.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful. This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

COURT NOTES

John C. Arnold, Esq., acted the part of "Killjoy" in the Clearfield county courts on Saturday, when he filed three separate divorce actions, on behalf of as many mismated couples.

In the first case Stella F. Reid, of Curwensville, asked a divorce from her husband David Reid, for the very good reason that when he married her on August 20, 1917, David already had a wife and two wee bairns in Fife, Scotland. The statement sets forth that Reid was married in Scotland June 7, 1912, and not only failed to mention that fact to the complainant before he married her, but had also neglected to secure the proper and necessary legal right to acquire a second wife.

Helen K. Shultz asks a divorce from Theodore Shultz after a married life extending from January 8, 1911, to August 3, 1919. Cruel and barbarous treatment is the reason advanced for the action.

I. J. Duke wants a divorce from his wife Sue B. Duke, whom he married May 5, 1898, and who deserted him July 15, 1918.

Attorneys E. J. Boose, James A. Gleason and L. D. McCall, of DuBois, transacted legal business at the Court House today.

United States' Land Best.

British America, which consists of Canada, Newfoundland and a number of islands, has an area of 3,750,000 square miles, while the total area of the United States and its possessions is 3,743,446 square miles. Thus Britain has a little more territory, but it is largely so far north as to be of comparatively little value.

It appears that snakes change their skins several times a year before reaching the adult state. The main reason why snakes cast their skins is to provide for increased growth. The skin of a snake does not grow with the growth of the body, as is the case with warm blooded creatures. So when it begins to get too tight it is discarded.

NEWS OF OUR NEIGHBORS

CURWENSVILLE

Mail carrier Ed. Benson was off duty a few days on account of illness last and part of this week. Raymond Wingert, a clerk in the postoffice, substituted for him.

A number of persons who were converted at the revival meetings in the M. E. church several months ago, were admitted to full membership during the services on Sabbath forenoon.

Don. Miller, of Grampian, visited the High School one day last week and distributed to the boy scouts copies of the game forestry laws, with an admonition to read and study them carefully during the summer months

The ice has gone out of Anderson Creek and did little or no damage in its passage down the stream to the river. The ice was very thick and heavy, more so than it has been on this stream for a number of years past. The ice on the river is from two to three feet in thickness, and should it break and go out with a rush and high water, it is feared that great damage to people living along the river banks will result.

The entire family of Joseph Bunnell, residing out along the Bailey Road, is down with the influenza, with the exception of the husband and father.

Hugh Gallagher has disposed of his handsome new dwelling house, situate on North Filbert street, to Frank Hastings, who will take possession of the same on or about the first of April. It is not Mr. Galagher's intention to remove from Curwensville, and his only reason for selling was that the house was too large for his present family.

The Curwensville Herald, through the writings of one of the publicity committee connected with the Industrial and Community Association, prints the inspiring news that "a shirt factory is practically assured for Curwensville." A section of a paragraph in the article says: "'For reasons best known to the association it is impossible to divulge the name of the concern at present, but that Curwensville is about to come face to face with a proposition that should have the united support of every citizen." So say we all. The article further says that "It is squarely up to us to prove our loyalty as good citizens of Curwensville to put every sinew and nucleus at our command to cultivate these hidden springs of fortune so that they may bear the fruits that each and every resident is entitled to share in." We say amen to that. Yet we will say this free and aboveboard and without fear of contradictions from any sensible thinking man, that the greatest need of Curwensville today is dwelling houses somewhere to lodge people and make them comfortable when they do come to our town. One day last week the writer heard six inquiries made: "Where can I get a house. I would like to move here." Five of these inquiries came from people who reside in other towns. And there you are. We have been accused of writing articles that were detrimental to the town's interest. In fact we were taken to the task about it one day last week on the street. We inquired around among some the business men and a lot of other good citizens, if they had ever read anything that we had written which would prove the assertion and one and all answered that they had not. If a shirt factory can be landed, well and good, and from what we learned the other day from a young man who is on the ground floor, we were assured that the factory was a sure thing, and when ready for operation would employ a large number of girls.

Dick Lantz, who has been employed at the Crescent Refractories company brick yard at this place for the past two years, or perhaps longer, has resigned his position and accepted the agency of the Equitable Life Insurance society, for this district. Dick is a good "mixer" among the workingmen and a hustler and will no doubt make good in his new vocation. He has the best wishes of his many friends, at any rate.

Charles Heitzenrather, of this place and Miss Della Bowman, of Olanta, Pike township, were united in marriage one day about the middle of last week, the ceremony being performed at Clearfield. The newlyweds expect to reside in Curwensville, the groom being an employee of the Penn Public Service company.

Mrs. Harry Bilger was taken seriously ill at her home on North Pine street last Friday. At this writing she is slowly recovering.

At a recent meeting of Joshua Sipes Post, American Legion, No. 505, a resolution was passed thanking the Rescue Hose and Ladder company for the use of their rooms in the Public building and for other favors tendered the Post while in preparation or organization.

Mr. Richards and daughter, Miss Grila, and Mrs. Calvin Walters and two sons, William and Furman, all of Altoona, spent last Saturday with Mrs. Furman Tate, a sister of Mrs. Walters.

W. P. Tate is visiting his sister-in-law, Mrs. Jennie Tate, in Mahaffey.

AN INSIDE BATH MAKES YOU LOOK AND FEEL FRESH

Says a glass of hot water with phosphate before breakfast keeps illness away.

Physicians the world over recommend the inside bath, declaring this is of vastly more importance than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing ill health, while the pores in the ten yards of bowels do.

Men and women are urged to drink each morning, before breakfast, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of helping to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible material, poisons, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the alimentary canal before eating more food.

Those who wake up with bad breath, coated tongue, nasty taste or have a dull aching head, sallow complexion, acid stomach; others who have bilious attacks or constipation, should obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little but is sufficient to show the value of inside bathing.

We Kept Our Trains Moving—

IT was January of the critical year 1918. Russia had gone Bolshevik and was negotiating a disastrous peace with the Teutons. Italy was struggling to recover from a defeat which left hundreds of square miles of territory in the hands of the enemy. French and British forces had to be diverted to her help. German newspapers were bragging that the U-boats were sinking more than 800,000 tons of shipping each month. The German High Command was preparing for the greatest thrust of the war. France was able to give her people only five slices of bread a day. Great Britain was undergoing a food crisis. Officials of the Allies were imploring America for munitions, food and men. Lord Rhondda, Food Controller of Great Britain, cabled to Washington:

"Unless America can increase in January the quantity of supplies sent in December, I am unwilling to guarantee that the allied nations can hold out."

OVER here there was a coal famine, with heatless days, lightless nights, gasless Sundays and workless Mondays. The worst blizzard in fifty years, accompanied by weather below zero, had overwhelmed the country. More than 200 ships lay idle in New York Harbor, waiting to carry supplies to our Allies. The railroads were so badly congested that a freight embargo had to be declared on all but materials essential to the prosecution of the war. The ruin of civilization impended if foodstuffs could not be moved.

We kept our trains moving in spite of the weather. Our cars carried a good proportion of the food and munitions and coal needed to win the war. It was a victory over the worst conditions of a generation.

What our lines did in that emergency, we can do again and for the same reason. We have the morale, the men and the tracks necessary for serving the public even under extreme difficulties.

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

Only A Limited Number of Ford Cars

There are mighty good reasons why you should buy your Ford car now. But the biggest one is that there are only so many Ford cars—just a specific limited number—alloted to this territory. Those who buy their cars now will be wise. They will have them to use whenever they wish.

Don't put it off—next spring, even next month, is an uncertainty. We cannot take orders for spring delivery. Even now, we must have signed bona-fide orders before our monthly allotment is shipped us. So the only way for you to be sure of getting a Ford car, is to order it now. Get your name on an order. It is your protection.

Again we tell you, the allotment for this territory is limited and you must buy now while deliveries are possible. As ever, the demand for Ford cars is away in advance of production. So, it's first come, first served. Spring, summer, autumn and winter are all the same to the Ford car. It is a valuable servant every day of the year. Rain or shine, it is ready for your demands. Buy now and get prompt delivery. You won't have to store it. You can use it. Buy now while the buying is possible.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—In a base hospital at Meully, France, his face disfigured beyond recognition, an American soldier serving in the French army attracts attention by his deep despondency. Asked by the surgeons for a photograph to guide them in making over his face, he offers in derision a picture of the Savior, bidding them take that as a model. They do so, making a remarkable likeness.

CHAPTER II.—Invalided home, on the boat he meets Martin Harmon, New York broker, who is attracted by his remarkable features. The ex-soldier gives his name as "Henry Hilliard," and his home as Syracuse, New York. He left there under a cloud, and is embittered against his former fellow townsmen. Harmon makes him a proposition to sell mining stocks in Syracuse, concealing his identity. He accepts it, seeing in it a chance to make good and prove he has been underestimated.

CHAPTER III.—In Syracuse "Hilliard" (in reality Richard Morgan) is accepted as a stranger. He visits James Cullen, a former employer, relating a story of the death of Richard Morgan, and is surprised at the regret shown by Cullen and his youthful daughter Angela. While at the Cullen home Carol Durant, Morgan's former fiancee, makes a call.

CHAPTER IV.—Hilliard repeats to Carol his story of Morgan's death and is deeply moved by the evidence of her deep feeling for the supposed dead man. He resolves, however, to continue the deception.

CHAPTER V.—Next day Hilliard gathers from Angela that Carol had always loved Dick Morgan, and while delivering to her a letter supposedly from her former fiancee realizes that his affection is unchanged. His welcome by Doctor Durant, Carol's father, also shakes his resolution to continue the deception, but he conquers it.

CHAPTER VI.—In Syracuse Hilliard is looked upon as a capitalist and mining expert, and in that capacity, in pursuance of his object, interests Cullen in the possibility of wealth in mining properties. The Cullens and Hilliard go to the Durant home for dinner.

CHAPTER VII.—Observations at the Durants' convince Hilliard that the doctor and his daughter had always been his true friends, and his love for Carol becomes stronger. He realizes he has a dangerous rival in Jack Armstrong, also very much in love with Carol, and the two men tacitly agree to fight it out fairly.

CHAPTER VIII.—Despite his success in interesting capitalists of Syracuse in his mining venture (which he believes to be a sound proposition) Hilliard regrets having placed himself in such a false position, but in justice to Harmon feels he must go on. He makes confession to Carol of his love for her, and she admits the possibility of his affection being returned in time.

CHAPTER IX.—Rufus Waring, youthful suitor of Angela Cullen, jealous of Hilliard, becomes angrily watchful of the latter's business. Harmon visits Syracuse, and a prominent business man of the city, seeing them together, warns Hilliard of Harmon's reputation. Disturbed, Hilliard asks Harmon for an explanation, and the broker unguardedly admits a former swindle, and also that the mining proposition is a "fake." Hilliard threatens to make the knowledge public, but Harmon shows him he has made himself an accessory. Hilliard sees nothing to do but go on with the deals.

CHAPTER X.—In an interview with Carol, deeply touched by her friendliness and interest in him, Hilliard almost determines to admit his duplicity, plead for forgiveness, and make a fresh start, but cannot nerve himself to the confession.

CHAPTER XI.

H. If way down James street, Hilliard, driving his runabout in utter disregard of the traffic rules, was reliving, moment by moment, and word by word, the conversations of the earlier evening. He had gone to Carol with the sturdy intention of behaving himself manfully and in detail, but in the doctor's study he had perceived another, and what seemed to him a more unselfish method of achieving the same end. He had fancied that if he could preserve intact the memory of Dicky Morgan, if he could prevent the world—and especially that part of it personal to the Cullens and Durants—from knowing what a despicable thing it was that Dick Morgan had done, he could save a modicum of pain for those who would otherwise be most affected. This conception had interfered to make his talk with Carol somewhat aimless . . . he had been under the dual necessity of damning Hilliard without implicating Morgan. And how bunglingly he had accomplished it! How needlessly—how unsuccessfully!

Or impulse, he checked the speed of the car and swerved to the left; he was actuated by a sudden desire to run over to the University club and see Armstrong. He had no definite plan as to what he should say or do, he merely craved to meet his rival face to face, and have it out with him. Man to man—and this time there should be no bungling.

Mr. Armstrong, it seemed was in the library . . . and would come down directly. Indeed he followed almost on the heels of the messenger.

"Why, hello, Hilliard," he said rather stiffly. "Did you want to see me? That's too bad—I've got to leave here in just a couple of seconds to catch my train. I'm going West tonight."

"I'll take you over," said Hilliard, shortly. "That'll save you a minute or two—and give us time to chat. My car's outside."

"Why—under the circumstances . . ." Armstrong's glance was diverted. "I don't think I can let you do that—take me over, I mean. I'm going West on a business trip and I don't think it would be very appropriate for you to—"

"Oh—you are?" Hilliard felt streaks of ice coursing along his spine. "How far West?"

Armstrong consulted his watch nervously.

"Hilliard," he said, "I like to do things out in the open. There are just two reasons why I don't think you really want to invite me to ride down to the station with you. If I'm wrong, it's up to you to say so. One of 'em is that Rufus Waring has asked me to stop off at Butte—I'm going a good deal further than that—and look up some matters for him. I guess you know as well as I do what they are. . . ."

Hilliard fumbled his hat. "I see. And—the other reason?"

Armstrong suddenly straightened; and his voice had a curious ring to it—a ring which electrified Hilliard and awoke the most petrifying alarms within him.

"But does one ordinarily mention—certain kinds of people—in a men's club? I don't know how it is where you come from—but here, we don't."

Hilliard smiled rapidly; it was the utmost perversity of emotion, for he knew now why Carol had been so explicit in her sympathy . . . why she had been so meticulous to let him realize that she wanted him as a friend; only as a friend . . . and here was Armstrong, concealing with difficulty the triumph he was hiding at . . .

"No," he said harshly. "One doesn't, but there isn't anything to keep us from mentioning anybody we like outside the club, is there?"

"Why—not that I—"

"Then I'll take you down anyway," said Hilliard. "And let's see if we can't try to understand each other."

It took a brave man to accept the offer for Hilliard's eyes held little to recommend their owner as a prudent driver, or as a very pleasant companion. Armstrong however, was already putting on his hat.

* * * * * * *

They had driven over to the station in silence. Hilliard parking the runabout carefully, turned to his passenger.

"We've got ten good minutes," he said, "Your train isn't even in yet—go ahead and talk."

Armstrong, after a momentary delay, put out a conciliating hand. "Old man," he said, "let's play the rest of this out like two sensible people. We won't get anywhere by bickering and I suppose it won't do any harm for us to put all the cards on the table, and know exactly where we stand. Of course, you haven't known me very long, and I haven't known you . . . but suppose, just to help along the understanding, we take each other at face value."

Hilliard winced.

"Well—suppose we do. Then what?"

"Then you can't hold it up against me for stopping off at Butte on my way out. I haven't any motive in it—I promised to do it as a favor to Rufe Waring. It isn't a personal issue at all. I know exactly how it must appear to you but . . . I'm not that sort of man, Hilliard. I wouldn't have dreamed of it myself. That's straight!"

The masquerader regarded him earnestly—and yielded to his evident sincerity.

"Way down deep," he said, at length, "I know you're not, but . . . what's

"What's That For?"

that for?" He referred to Armstrong's outstretched hand. "Oh! . . . all right." They shook hands solemnly. "At the same time it would have been so perfectly natural for you to feel like getting whatever leverage you could—"

"There's no need of that—now," said Armstrong. His smile was proud and brilliant, and Hilliard withered under it.

"Well I wasn't sure."

"I don't deny," said Armstrong slowly, "that at first sight this is a queer thing for me to do—to check up your property I mean—when you and I have had such an intimate relationship as opponents. And I wouldn't for the world have agreed to it if it could have had the slightest connection with with your own private affairs. It hasn't—it can't have. I give you my word on that; it's been settled without the slightest reference to anything else. But since it hasn't, and since Rufus asked me as a favor—and promised to tell you about it—and it's absolutely commercial—"

"That's enough. I'm glad you're going to do it." Hilliard's voice was gruff; it was a tribute to his companion's code of ethics. "Know anything about mining?"

"Not a thing. But I'm to go to a law firm in Butte—and of course it's only a formality, anyway. I'll probably find it's better than you ever claimed. But Rufe asked me."

"I see. Well—now about this other matter . . ."

Armstrong was watching the westbound express as it felt its cautious way through Railroad avenue to the station.

"Yes?"

Hilliard was suddenly ashamed of himself, he was forced to concede that his rival had the advantage of him in poise and altruism. He shook himself free of the savage resentment which was stealing upon him.

"We're only human—both of us. Perhaps—under the circumstances—the best thing we can say is to say nothing . . . except that I wish you all the luck in the world. I don't pretend it isn't a hard thing to say—but I'm trying to mean it. And you certainly deserve it."

"And to you," said Armstrong cheerfully. "And no bad feelings on either side. And I hope your mine makes a million dollars for you."

"Thanks," said Hilliard, grimly. "I'll need it. But don't be afraid to send Rufus your honest opinion—will you?"

"No—and I'll send it to you, too. That's only fair. . . . I'd better be starting."

They shook hands again across the wheel.

"You're a good sport, Armstrong . . . don't think I've got any resentment left . . . except a bit that I can't quite swallow on short notice . . ."

"I know. But you don't need to worry, old man. Your future's bright enough—as I hope to wire Rufus about Saturday."

Too late, Hilliard perceived that they were talking at cross purposes—Armstrong was evidently thinking about the mine. But there was time only for a last gesture of farewell; and Armstrong had disappeared in the depths of the trainshed. Armstrong . . . the victor, and the inquisitioner . . . was on the road to Butte!

* * * * * * *

Work, hard work, the panacea and the salvation of those who are sore distressed, even this cheapest relief was denied Hilliard. He was left alone with his problem, wrestling with it once more in the black darkness of despondency, and knowing neither a means of simplifying it, nor a counselor to whom he could turn for aid.

He conceded that there was only one thing for him to do, and he intended to do it, but he was harassed because he had so much time to think about it. Not since the first sickening shock of Harmon's revelation had he doubted his own purpose; it was merely the machinery of it which perplexed him. His confidence in himself gradually returned; he was abnormally calm and determined; he had no more idea of resisting his impulses than he would have had, in Flanders, of disobeying his orders. The thing was there to be done, and he, regardless of his own future, was there to do it.

Overnight, he had occupied himself with some elementary accounting.

With Harmon's check, his outstanding balance for expenses, and what money he could raise by selling his runabout and a few personal possessions, he had on hand a matter of ninety-six hundred dollars; Syracuse had entrusted him with sixty-two thousand. To compromise pro rata with his creditors—this was apparently his only resource, and yet how insufficient a reparation it was! He knew that it had been his duty to investigate the Montana property before he began to exploit it; he knew that his self-introduction to Syracuse had been blatantly inexcusable, and that not even the fact that he had been carried away by the drama of it could ever be excused. His intricate fabric of deception, now that he inspected it from this different viewpoint, was flimsy—shoddy. He could be traced—if anyone cared to spend the time, and the energy, if Armstrong—or Rufus Waring—cared to spend it, for example. Of course there was always the refuge of flight but in Flanders men learn not to desert their posts, and Hilliard had learned that lesson among the first. Loyalty to the cause of fighting had grown automatic; flight was simply inconceivable to him.

Yes he could gather his resources and place them, together with himself, in the hands of his subscribers, and their vengeance would be twofold: once for their loss out of pocket, once for the loss out of faith. He had deserved no leniency, and he expected none. But as for those who, without the financial entanglement, had respected him, and honored him, as for Carol Durant and Angela . . .

Well as for Carol he was at least relieved of the terrific mental convulsion which would surely have fallen upon him if he had had reason to believe that she loved him. As it was her shock at his disaster would be tempered by Armstrong's sane philosophy at most she would lose in Hilliard a friend of only a few months—a man she had wanted to retain as a friend, but—by her own admission—as that and no more. This was a consolation trifling and fragile, to be sure but something saved out of the wreck.

As to Armstrong—Hilliard, marveling somewhat at his own tolerance, wished him joy. Armstrong was fine and clean and manly; he had well merited his victory. As to Mr. Cullen—Hilliard was torn with regret, but

How to Keep House Without a Maid

Housemaids are becoming fewer. More than ever it is devolving upon womankind to conduct household affairs without help.

"Today the shortage of domestic help is more acute than it ever was," writes W. L. George, an able writer on home topics. "This shortage has been growing for the last thirty years, ever since factories began to absorb women—and there is no sign of improvement."

If you have had trouble in finding a maid or laundress; if you are in this readjustment period, you will find our laundry service highly helpful.

It is a modern service. Our man takes up your family bundle at a definite time each week. We sort the things that come to us, and wash each class of goods separately—hosiery is only washed with hosiery; table linen only with table linen.

You will approve also of our laundering process. Not the washboard, but mellow, soft water, and creamy suds of a pure soap are what we use. It is a method much more beneficial for the clothes than the old way of the laundress.

We iron everything, also—give it that snowy whiteness, and immaculate finish that fastidious housewives so much desire.

We can make your housework much lighter. And the cost is small. Telephone us and our driver will call for your family washing.

One Fine Fountain Syringe

Figure it from a point of service. Only service can tell; and in our fountain syringe we offer the finest quality of rubber, which undoubtedly gives the longest service. Still one of these fine fountain syringes will not cost any more than a cheap one, but it does wear better, and is cheaper to buy in the end anyway.

The MAN NOBODY KNEW

after all, Cullen's gullibility was what had made the campaign so childishly simple. As to Angela . . . who had really loved him . . .

"Oh, the poor little kid!" said Hilliard softly. "The poor little kid. . . ."

And perhaps he had never loved Carol Durant so much as when, at ten o'clock that sunny morning, he went up the steps of Angela's house to destroy a little girl's regard for him before it could be destroyed by others.

On the doorstep, he found strength in the memory of poor Pierre Dutout. In a way, Hilliard felt that he, too, was giving up his life as Dutout had given his . . . with a smile for the fate, and a blessing for the future. Because he was afraid, unnervedly afraid, that Angela, after all, was in love with him—and when he put a stop to that, it was the beginning of the end.

ITCHING ECZEMA DRIED RIGHT UP WITH SULPHUR

Any breaking out of the skin, even fiery, itching eczema, can be quickly overcome by applying a little Mentho-Sulphur, says a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, this sulphur preparation instantly brings ease from skin irritation, soothes and heals the eczema right up and leaves the skin clear and smooth.

It seldom fails to relieve the torment and disfigurement. Sufferers from skin trouble should get a little jar of Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like a cold cream.

Mrs. W. A. Hagerty is quite critically ill at her home on Pine street. She is suffering from uraemic poisoning.

Mrs William Orr, of Glen Richey, was shopping in town Saturday.
